There has been a rush within the past few years towards natural plants and berries that have high anti-oxidation properties. Why the rush?

Usually, these rushes to the 'flavor of the day' are usually more because of well timed, well placed advertising media than for strong double blind 'New England Journal of Medicine' type reasons. Silver Colloidal and its antibacterial properties for health appears to be getting great reviews and in various forms after a number of years has finally found limited approval by the FDA.
